Prime Time literacy program comes to Crete

Prime Time Family Reading Time, a Nebraska Humanities Council (NHC) family literacy program for low-literacy, low-income families, will be presented in Crete with opportunities for both Spanish- and English-speaking parents and their children.

The Crete Public Library will host the award-winning series on six consecutive Saturday mornings from Sept. 16 to Oct. 21. Each program begins with a light breakfast at Grace United Methodist Church and continues at the library with storytelling and discussion based on award-winning children's literature.

The six-week series of reading and discussion is designed for families with children ages five to 10. It includes sessions on fairness, greed, dreams, cleverness, and loyalty. All books are read and discussed in both English and Spanish.

Discussion leader Joel Gajardo and storyteller Ricardo Garcia introduce parents to the benefits and pleasures of reading and discussing stories with their children, and a library representative introduces families to library resources and services. Younger siblings participate in separate pre-reading activities.

Prime Time reinforces the role of the family in society, encourages parents and children to form bonds over reading and learning together, and teaches parents and children to read and discuss humanities topics. The program also encourages low-literacy, low-income parents to enter or continue their own educational programs to improve their employment opportunities.

"It is so important for children to learn the joys of reading early in life, especially when it involves reading and discussing books with their families. A love for learning through reading has a positive impact on how well a child does in school," said NHC Program Officer Erika Hamilton. "We're pleased to be working with the Crete Public Library to bring this exciting family literacy program to the citizens of Crete."

Initially developed by the Louisiana Endowment for the Humanities, Prime Time has been held in Lincoln, Omaha, Scottsbluff, Grand Island, and other Nebraska communities over the last several years.

Bilingual Prime Time programs are sponsored by the NHC, the State of Nebraska, the Nebraska Library Commission, and TierOne Charitable Foundation. Local funders for Prime Time in Crete include Pinnacle Bank. The NHC is a private, statewide, non-profit affiliate of the National Endowment for the Humanities.
